NEW 1957 PLYMOUTH BEING DISPLAYED BY LEWIS MOTOR CO.

The 1957 Plymouth fs being displayed by Lewis Motor Company. Lower, wider and more powerful, the new model represents a complete change in styling, body structure and chassis.

Lewis Motor Co. said that the new car is the result of a telescoping of Plymouth's forward planning. "The car we are displaying has the style and features of the car that had been planned, a few years ago, for about 1960," the firm said. "Plymouth has moved ahead faster than we had hoped. The public has shown an eagerness to acept dramatic change."

1957 Plymouth models are as much as five inches lower than corresponding 1956 models. The wheelbase has been lengthened from 115 inches for all models in 1956 to 118 inches for standard models and 122 inches for Suburban station wagons in the 1957 line.

The new car has the appearance of greater length which comes from functional styling.

THE ONE BIG ISSUE

(Editor's note: A reader has asked us to reprint the following informative article. It is by Art Hood and appeared in the October 15 issue of American Lumberman and Building Products Merchandiser.)

"In a letter concerning the political scene in 1857 Lord McCauley was very skeptical about the survival of the American republic. He based his opinion on his belief that we would always have a majority of 'have nots' over the 'haives.' He predicted that the votes of the 'have nots' would ultimately destroy political and economic freedom in our country.

"Thanks to the ingeunity of our researchers, the scientists and inventors of our country, to the aggressiveness of our business management, and to the ever-growing skill and capacity of our other workers, practically every American today is in the 'have' as opposed to the 'have not' category.

"It is a rare American family indeed that doesn't own either a home, a car, an insurance policy, a common stock, a savings account or some other property of real tangible value.

With rare exceptions, the 'have nots' in America are such because of improvidence.

"The demagogue would persuade us that we should increase the already burdensome taxes of the 'haves', who must pay the bulk of all taxes, to finance rash promises to special interest groups.

"Every voter is a member of some special interest group that could be identified. Each of us should ask ourselves 'shall we permit ourselves to be befuddled and fooled by office seekers who appeal to special interest greed rather than to the welfare of all?'

"We 'haves' can cut our own throats by voting for the wrong candidates.

"The platforms of both parties reveal practically no basic difference in general objectives. Every candidate of both parties stands for peace, prosperity and leadership in world affairs.

"The question resolves itself, then, as to what the individual candidate stands for in the domestic economy.

"Whether an 'inner' who wants to stay in, or an 'outer' who wants to get in, each candidate of both party should be weighed by each voter on one set of scales:

"Does he propose to tax and tax and spend and spend regardless of our public debt?

"Does he propose measures which will depreciate the purchasing value of our dollar and decrease the real value of our government bonds, our insurance policies and other savings? Does he reveal financial recklessness by making promises that involve additional government expenditures without stiuplating where the additional money will come from?

"Listening to the airways we hear the candidates of both parties making promises that are financially extravagant.

"The wise voter will vote for the least reckless of any two candidates whether Republican or Democrat.

"The record of each individual candidate regardless of party, should be examined in the light of two final questions:

"1. In the administration of his office or function of government will he , if elected, tend to be profligate or cautious with our money?

"2. At the end of his administration will the probable result of his election to office be lowered dollar values and decreased values of our insurance policies, our pensions and our savings, or will his election tend to stabilize values and the cost of living?

"These are the real questions, the simple issues. Given sufficient study the voter should be able to choose between any two candidates for any office."

* One Vote Cast for Hoopes

Appomattox County held to its traditional Democratic moorings in Tuesday's election, nine of the ten precincts rolling up a 200-vote margin for the Democratic ticket. Virginia went heavily for the Republicans, as did the nation, as President Eisenhower was returned for another four-year term.

All incumbent Congressmen in Virginia won new terms, the count continuing at eight Democrats and two Republicans.

Three proposed State Constitutional amendments passed handily. Representative Watkins M. Abbitt, unopposed, received a fine vote of confidence in the Fourth District.

The voters in Appomattox County turned out 2,175 strong, to roll up a larger vote than in 1952. Walkers Church precinct went to Eisenhower, the other nine for Stevenson.

The county vote for T. Coleman Andrews, and the new States Rights ticket, was surprisingly light. This ticket carried one Virginia county, Prince Edward.

The Democrats retained control of the House of Representatives, and the U. S. Senate by approximately the same margins as in the present Congress.

It was a great personal victory for President Eisenhower, as he carried 41 of the 48 states, the first Republican President in 56 years to win a second term. The national vote was heavy, well over 61 million. Stevenson did not carry a state outside of the South.

In South Carolina, Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, polled 81,000 votes on the States Rights ticket, close behind Stevenson's 122,000, and ahead of Eisenhower.

Scale Defects In Appomattox Below Average

At a recent testing of scales and measuring devices in Appomattox County, made by the Division of Markets of the Virginia Department of Agriculture, and reported to this county officials, it was noted that the percentage of rejected scales in this county was lower than the state average. Ten per cent of the scales tested were rejected as compared to the state-wide averag of 16% in 1955.

The gasoline pumps and grease measurers in use at service stations were also found to be accurate. The percentage rejected compared favorably with the state average of 14%. Only 5% were measuring inaccurately. Others rejected failed to conform to specifications.

The devices rejected will be retested as soon as time is elapsed for necessary repairs. Correct devices are marked with a Black and Red approval sticker.

The quantity of individual packages packed prior to time of sale has received increased attention in recent inspections, due to the consumer acceptance of individual prepackaged commodities. The state inspector checked 458 preweighed packages in this county, and of the various commodities, 4% were found short.

Average Falls In Old Belt Despite Quality

During the past week of sales on the Old Belt tobacco markets most grade averages and the general average were lower than the previous week, but the quality was better. Gross sales for the week amounted to 41,882,003 pounds and averaged $51.73. This average was $1.28 below last week's. Dr. Leavell Speaks Before Woman's Club

An interested and appreciative audience, made up of members of the Woman's Club of Appomattox and their guests, including many teachers of the county schools, heard Dr. Ullin Leavell, director of the McGuffey Reading Clinic of the University of Virginia, on Thursday afternoon in the Appomattox Elementary School auditorium. Dr. Leavell came here upon the invitation of Mrs. Frances Cheatham, as chairman of the Education Department of the Woman's Club. Mrs. Samuel S. Shouse introduced the celebrated educator.

Dr. Leavell said the primary problem of education is the lack of sufficient qualified teachers and the shortage of classrooms. He substantiated this statement by revealing that there are 33 million school children with only one million classrooms. Theer are only 800,000 qualified and certified teachers.

Dr. Leavell believes that reading is the basic skill of civilization and said that if children are taught to read, they can progress in all other subjects. He said, "Reading is not a school subject but an ability."

He warned the parents that comic books offer great competition to the reading of good literature and cited astounding figures to show the amount of money spent each year for this undesirable type of reading.

In colsing, Dr. Leavell said, "A child can be taught to like anything. Why not teach them to like good reading material? Children, unlike animals, have long childhoods during which time parents and teachers can train them properly. Animals have brief childhoods and become adapted to many circumstances because of their nature. There is a great need for a concerted program of home, church and school to solve problems of juvenile behavior. We have delightful children and can do anything we want to with them."

A brief business session was held, with Mrs. Harold Y. Spencer, president, presiding.

NEW BOOK IN THE COUNTY LIBRARY

Billy Graham, by Stanley High.

Here at last is the full, authentic stirring story of Billy Graham — the dynamic evangelist whose amazing, international ministry has been called "the phenomenon of the mid-twentieth century."

Though only thirty-eight years old, Billy Graham has probably preached face to face to more people than any spokesman for Christianity in all history: an estimated 20,000,000. Another 20,000,000 listen to his weekly radio program, The Hour of Decision. More astounding still, under his ministry more than 1,000,000 persons have been converted and remain, a remarkable majority of them, devout and practicing Christians.

The following seniors will be playing their last game for the Blue Hornets: Tommie O'Brien, John Paulette, Bradley Babcock, Fountain Conner, Jack Caldwell, Joe Fuller, Buddy Poe and James Carter. These boys will be missed very greatly next season when the Blue Hornets take to the football field again. They have done a fine job for the team this season.

Last Friday night, in ankle deep mud, the Blue Hornets downed the Fluvanna High School by a score of 7 to 0. A. H. S. played its best defensive game of the season. The score was made by Bradley Babcock, who quarterback sneaked the ball over from the one yard line. The extra point was made by Leon Edmunds. Backs gaining the most yardage for the Blue Hornets were: Leon Edmunds, Dan Coleman, Bradley Babcock, Terrell Martin and Arnold Whitehead. On defense, Tommie O'Brien, John Paulette, Buddy Poe and Joey George did a very good job.
